

WOMEN IN TECH

Q&A

Anna Geortler

Operations Manager

What does a 'day in the life' look like in your role?

This is the most interesting aspect of my job. No two days are alike. I could be working hand in hand with my team, on a conference call, performing a wide variety of administrative functions, or planning and training.

What sparked your interest in choosing technology as a career?

I worked in a technical job in the United States Army and really enjoyed it. That shaped my decision to work in technology in the civilian sector.

What is the best question you've asked a mentor?

What their biggest failure was and what they learned from it. The open and honest dialogue that came from that exchange still helps me today.

What's your biggest success or greatest learning opportunity?

The moments when I learn the most is when the entire team is involved in the solution. Amazing creative ideas come out of these brainstorming sessions.

What is one trait you need to be a great leader?

Integrity. Your team should see that your beliefs, ethics, commitments, and values align with your actions and behaviors.

What advice would you give to young professionals starting in tech?

If you have a passion for technology do what you love and you will never work a day in your life.

YOUR TEAM SHOULD SEE THAT YOUR BELIEFS, ETHICS,
COMMITMENTS, AND VALUES
ALIGN WITH YOUR ACTIONS
AND BEHAVIORS.
